Spending time with those who have served

Just a few days before Christmas I had the opportunity to spend a few hours with some of the men and women who have served our country.

The group was gathered in Bourke Hall at the North Chicago VA Medical Center. A local radio disc jockey was entertaining the folks with a free holiday show that included live music, a rib dinner and giveaways.

The DJ was Rich Kingsley of the radio station WRLR-LPFM 98.3 in Round Lake Heights.

Kingsley said he wanted to have a party for the vets because they have done so much for others.

It seems he has a soft spot in his heart for those who have dedicated themselves to protecting the United States.

Kingsley has hosted large parties for veterans in the past. Often, he receives financial donations and other assistance from community organizations and businesses for the occasions.

For that, he is grateful. He uses the contributions to show area vets a good time.

And that was the result of the celebration that took place at the North Chicago VA Medical Center on Dec. 21.

"I love the music," said former Marine Matthew Davis while at the party. "I think [Kingsley has] got some good priorities, and he's going about his business in a smart way."

Happy holidays to all of the people who have worked to make this country a better place.

And that includes our veterans.

The varsity pom pon's team recently won second place in the Team Dance Illinois Competition at Maine South High School. The team took second place in the AAA category in lyrical, open dance and kick.

Veterans receive thank-you show

Local radio personality hosts holiday celebration at VA medical center

By KATHY GRESEY

kgresey@nwnewsgroup.com

NORTH CHICAGO – Glenn Warr wasted no time when he heard the song "Black Magic Woman" being played the way Santana would have done it.

Warr, 60, found a dance partner and hit the floor at the North Chicago VA Medical Center on Dec. 21. Live music can quell loneliness, he said, but the tunes better be good.

"It does make a difference to have quality entertainment," Warr said of having his spirits lifted during the holiday season. "It's very important."

Veterans of all ages enjoyed the rock and blues music that was performed by the Windy City Rev Ups as part of a free holiday show hosted by Rich Kingsley, a disc jockey for WRLR LP-FM 98.3, a radio station in Round Lake Heights.

The show was complete with a rib dinner and the distribution of greeting cards, hygienic products, T-shirts and bags filled with candy.

Kingsley hosted the event in honor of those who have served the United States. Military men and women are his heroes, he said.

"It's so nice to give them something to do," Kingsley said of being able to provide area veterans with a holiday program. "It doesn't matter what branch of the service [they] were in. [They] protected our country. It makes my heart feel good to give back."

Veterans at the medical center appreciated the gesture. About 100 attended the event.

"It's just nice to know that someone actually cares," said 56-year-old Jim Higgs, a South Florida native who served in the Navy for nine years. "Illinois – as a whole – has welcomed me. [It] is so veteran conscious."

Fellow veteran Laurence Holmes also enjoyed the festive occasion. The former Marine thought the food was top-notch.

"The ribs were totally falling off the bone," he said.

Kingsley collected monetary and other donations from community businesses for the holiday affair. He also had several "elves" help him organize the event.

One such helper was Holly Crites of Inglewood, who led Girl Scout Troop 1747 in creating the greeting cards that were given to the vets at the party. She also had the scouts collect the 1,500 hygienic items that were distributed to those who have served.

"They love it," Crites said of the scouts' involvement.

"This is the girls' favorite project because they know where [the cards and supplies] are going."

The holiday season is a particularly important time to host events at the VA medical center, said Pat Sullivan, director of the facility, explaining that some veterans have little contact with their friends and family.

"It could be a depressing time for them," he said. "But the medical center gets tremendous support from Lake County, whether it's the service organizations, the schools or individuals, like Rich. It's a way for them to say thank you."

Kenneth List, chief of community affairs at the medical center, tipped his hat to Kingsley.

"This is cool what Rich has done," he said. "His heart is in the right place. He's a great guy."

LAKE COUNTY JOURNALS

Thanks to generous donations by the members and employees of Community Trust Credit Union, more than 500 area kids and many local senior citizens are enjoying a holiday full of gifts and good will.

"Our members donated more than 500 new toys and games to be distributed to local families through the Marine Corps Toys for Tots and Salvation Army 'Angel Tree' programs," said Michelle Fairbanks, marketing director for the Gurnee-based credit union, in a release. "In addition, for the second year,

Members of the U.S. Marines Corps thanked Community Trust Credit Union's staff and members for their support of Toys for Tots.

our members generously contributed to the Home Instead Senior Care 'Be A Santa To A Senior.'"

The holiday toy drives concluded with a visit from St. Nick and four Marines on Dec. 13.

"Everyone who showed up to visit with Santa enjoyed cookies and juice, and every child got a goodie bag along with the chance to be photographed with Santa," Fairbanks said. "We all had a great time spreading holiday spirit, which was our goal from the start."

Gas-pump prices fall as heating oil costs jump

The Black Friday holiday sales rush was followed by a Blue Monday sales assessment report.

Although the number of shoppers was up from a year ago, it was reported that fewer dollars were spent.

Given the economic uncertainty, it's no surprise that Christmas shoppers practiced smart spending. They looked for bargains, and bought necessities rather than luxuries.

The one Christmas present that we all received was a markdown of prices at the gas pump. Once the gas prices had risen past $4 a gallon, we braced for the eventuality that $5 a gallon was just around the corner.

But a funny thing happened one day when we stopped at our gas stations. There was a sudden turnaround. As the pump prices plummeted almost daily, we were almost down to what we paid four years ago.

The "oil people" say that it's all about supply and demand. I wonder.

I think it was more a logical aftermath of the economic meltdown. It would be shameless of the oil barons to keep gouging the public when all around them people were suffering from the economic malaise.

As to the gas-price gift, it has been said that what one giveth, one taketh away.

John S. Matijevich

Isn't it normal for us mortals to figure that since global oil prices tanked, our home-heating costs would fall, too?

No such luck. Last year, when our heating bills rose significantly, we were told it was because of high energy costs to suppliers. Now, they say our heating bills will increase by nearly 20 percent this year.

The utility companies have an answer for everything, and we are victims of their fuzzy math. They have no compassion for consumers who are still paying for last year's heating and air-conditioning bills. With a straight face, they tell us that the gas supplies that are delivered to heat our homes this winter were purchased last year when energy prices were high. They know that they have us over the proverbial (oil) barrel.

The U.S. Energy Department can tell us exactly how many barrels of petroleum consumption were used each year.

What they don't tell us is the obscenely high profits that the oil companies gobbled up. They may have sold less gas, but their profits soared fourfold and more.

The only positive thing about the high gas pump price saga was that it forced the American driving public to drive less. Whether they drove gas-guzzling vehicles or not, they cut corners on their traveling habits. The question is will they return back to those habits, or will they ration their temptation to hit the road.

I thought that, with the annual urge to adopt New Year's resolutions, wouldn't it be nice if we gave up driving to places that we didn't have to go? Maybe we could put a reminder on the dashboard asking, "Is this trip necessary?"

Somewhere I read that if drivers reduced their miles driven by 8 percent, it would mean 5 percent less oil would be consumed and 2 percent less carbon emitted. Also, it is estimated that there would be a net benefit of $50 billion to $60 billion a year.

What a win-win resolution that would be.

The driving public wins; the environment wins; and though they won't admit it, the oil companies win, too ... only not as much as they're used to.

Political process saddening

To the Editor:

Needless to say, it's been a very difficult time following the arrest of the Gov. Rod Blagojevich and his former chief of staff John Harris. The criminal complaint was beyond alarming and corrective measures must be taken to begin the process of rebuilding the completely shattered public trust in our government and elected officials.

I am sorry to report that I do not see much hope for a timely resolution to the political posturing and failure to lead. Let me outline the events as I experienced them after the arrest.

As the week unfolded, it became clear that impeachment proceedings were warranted.

In spite of my numerous requests to House Speaker [Michael] Madigan requesting a meeting of House members to determine our course of action and respond to public outrage and concern, the speaker

Letters:

We welcome original letters on public issues. Letters must include the author's full name, address and day and evening phone numbers. Keep letters to 300 words or fewer.

instead prepared a bill calling for a special election to fill the U.S. Senate vacancy and scheduled a committee to hear the bill. This started a series of discussions for and against this course of action with opponents expressing concerns that the special election would cost as much as $50 million at a time when we have $4 billion in unpaid bills and a $3 billion deficit in this year's operating budget, and that a special election would take too long.

There are underlying political ramifications of a special election given the potential for a Republican to win in a general election when the electors sent a Democrat to the office.

Jan. 13 is the end of the 95th General Assembly, so unless the bill passes both the House and Senate and is signed by the governor before Jan. 14, 2009, all actions have to be repeated in the new 96th General Assembly.

I have been listed as an alternate on the newly created Special Investigative Committee to begin impeachment hearings, but there are outstanding issues that will delay the real work of the group.

The U.S. Attorney's Office has expressed concerns that witnesses for the criminal investigation might be compromised if they testify at impeachment proceedings.

Rules for the proceedings are not defined in the Constitution and the Republicans expressed some reservations about the rules proposed by the speaker.

There is no doubt the best course of action is for the governor to resign. I am in full agreement with the creation of a committee to begin impeachment hearings.

The question of a special election must be resolved.

However, I feel that the elected representatives in the House must be fully engaged in this process, yet the speaker proceeds without that input.

The present and future candidates must be accountable for making changes that will restore the public's confidence in public service and public servants.

Kathy Ryg

State representative, D-Vernon Hills

Ray of political sunshine

To the Editor:

As one of many who packed Republican Headquarters to hear Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran announce his switch to the Republican side of the aisle, I am appalled by the insults and accusations that have been forthcoming.

Regarding Democrat and state Sen. Terry Link of Waukegan, his pointed remarks chastising Sheriff Curran for his shift were featured in several news publications. But what about Link's own ethically challenged candidacy in the last election cycle? Link has no moral standing to criticize Mark Curran whose life and actions reveal a strong moral compass.

At the Dec. 15 news conference, Sheriff Curran spoke boldly and clearly about his decision, knowing that in his announcement he would lose friends and create enemies. To Mark Curran there was only one reason he made the switch. It was a "matter of conscience." His conscience would no longer allow him to remain a member of the Democrat Party. Sheriff Curran had hoped to fight for change within his own party, but came to the realization that change was not possible in the state or county Democrat Party.

Lake County Democrats who persist in calling Sheriff Curran's switch traitorous are displaying pettiness. Is Sheriff Curran a different person because he no longer has a "D" connected with his name? Mark Curran puts service above all else. He sees himself as a humble county office holder.

There is no reason to doubt that Sheriff Curran will continue to bring the same ethical values and standards as he did when a Democrat. There should be a public hunger for leaders at all levels of government who are motivated out of a desire to serve in a state where corruption has brought Illinois undesirable attention and shame.

Sheriff Curran brings a welcome ray of political sunshine to Lake County and the state.

A doozy of a letter to write

I've never been a Christmas letter writer.

Ironie, huh? Considering I write for a living.

My sister's the queen of Christmas letters in my family. She's just so dang clever I simply can't compete.

So I have to admit I took a little pleasure in hearing her agonize over this year's letter. See what happens when you set the bar too high? It'll fall on your head.

Nah, I say, better to surprise them with something extraordinary when they're expecting mediocrity or nothing at all. Though I suppose the problem with that is you've got to come up with the extraordinary at least once in awhile.

Honestly, I look forward to my sister's letter every year.

Here's a sampling of last year's letter, which shared, as she put it, what you might have heard had you been a mouse living in her house:

"I'm a psycho!" her oldest son, Jayce, proclaimed upon noticing that it was raining outside. He had predicted rain earlier that day, thus making him a "psychic."

"If I don't have wrapping paper, a shoebox, magazines and a large pink elephant before I go to school today I'm going to fail geography!" Jayce again, exactly one minute, 30 seconds before his bus was to arrive.

OK, my sister wrote, she was exaggerating about the pink elephant, but only slightly.

"Circle time, play, circle time, play, circle time, play, circle time, play, you picked me up." The response her youngest daughter Sayge, then 4, gave very single day when asked what she did at pre-school.

"Mom, am I old enough to shave my legs now?" Middle daughter Brynn on the occasion of her seventh birthday. Incidentally, my sister wrote, the answer was "No!"

I've always wanted to be like my big sister ... Except maybe for her klutziness. I mean, she did give herself a concussion by slamming the van hatch on her own head. And, come to think of it, I'd rather not have to regularly pluck one nasty long hair from my chin like she does. And there's that incident with the toilet paper hanging from her shorts ...

So, because I love my sister and her letters, here's a sampling of what I'd put in a Christmas letter, if I wasn't so lazy and actually wrote one.

"Here, Mommy, it's a picture of you driving crazy." My oldest daughter Summer, 5, upon handing me a drawing of a face with red eyes and wild, squiggly hair.

"Don't freak out. OK, Mommy?" My 2-year-old daughter Anna when I found her on top of the kitchen counter pouring an entire container of chocolate syrup into an overflowing cup.

"You're being ridiculous, Anna." My 2-year-old daughter Lilly to her twin sister, who was throwing a fit at the time.

Of course, I like to save that kind of stuff for my column.

• Columnist Jami Kunzer is the mother of Summer, 5; twins Anna and Lilly, 2; and infant twins Rowan and Finley.

FALL GUYS

Review: CD mixes great tunes, guest artists

By BRYAN WAWZENEK
bwawzenek@nwnewsjournal.com

"Folie à Deux" means a madness shared by two. As such, it's not just the title of Fall Out Boy's fifth album, but a description of the Chicago band's creative force.

Because bassist Pete Wentz writes Fall Out Boy's songs but leaves the singing to frontman Patrick Stump, Wentz and Stump are partners in madness. There seems to be plenty of that to go around on "Folie," which is flush with the sort of off-hand philosophizing, disgust, paranoia and lashing out usually reserved for too-honest, late-night blog posts.

Although the music is the slickest, most streamlined set we've seen from the "Dance, Dance" band, the lyrics are Wentz's darkest. He yearns for privacy on the shimmering "The (Shipped) Gold Standard," writing "I wanna scream 'I love you' from the top of my lungs / but I'm afraid someone else will hear me."

Whether the "someone else" is paparazzi or a nosy high school gossip is up to our imaginations; regardless, Wentz's constraints are driving him nuts.

He's often insulting himself on "Folie," from "I'm a loose bolt from a complete machine" on "Disloyal Order of Water Buffaloes" to "I got troubled thoughts and self-esteem to match" on "What a Catch, Donnie."

All that inadequacy gets murky beneath pop culture-referencing song titles (Pete Rose and "Glengarry Glen Ross" this time), Wentz's ADD lyrical shifts (to oblique comments about President Bush and obvious observations of a morally bankrupt celebrity culture) and questioned clichés ("home is where the heart is" and "the captain always goes down with the ship").

Then it's all buried under Stump's full-throated, goes-to-11 wail.
